HELPING YOUNG PEOPLE TO ACHIEVE A BETTER FUTURE

ELEMIS are honoured to have become a patron of the Prince's Trust, who support disadvantaged young people to develop essential life skills, get ready for work and access job and entrepreneurial opportunities.

Having a job or running a business can lead them to a more stable, fulfilling life.

The Prince's Trust believes that every young person should have the chance to succeed, no matter what their background or the challenges they are facing. They help those from disadvantaged communities and those facing the greatest adversity by supporting them to build the confidence and skills to live, learn and earn.

“

We're delighted to partner with ELEMIS and are grateful for its commitment to supporting young people at such a crucial time. Young people are currently facing multiple challenges and this ongoing support will make a big difference, enabling them to improve their confidence, help build the skills they need for work and to fulfil their potential.

– Sharon Arbuckle, Senior Head of Corporate Partnerships at The Prince's Trust

“

The Prince's Trust is dedicated to helping those between the ages of 11-30 from all over the UK and we are truly inspired by the work the organisation does, which has helped a million young people to date and supports more and more.”

– Oriele Frank, ELEMIS Co-founder And Chief Product & Sustainability Officer

ABOUT THE TRUST

It takes only a small donation to make a difference to a young life; £55 could give a young person an online session with a youth worker to build their confidence, resilience, and motivation. £84 could give one unemployed young person the chance to access an online course so they can re-engage with their community and develop critical employability skills for the future. £1,500 could help a young person to overcome unemployment and find work – experienced staff and volunteers can provide employability advice and connect them with employers.

ELEMIS will be donating £25,000 per year over the next four years.
